Central to family medicine training programs is developing family physicians who will embody a number of specific virtues including: excellence in clinical medicine, patient centered practice, and critical skills to enable them to maintain a practice consistent with evidence-based medicine. Scholarly activities, including research, foster a more active, individually driven element in family medicine residencies. Research reflects the knowledge derived from working with primary care, practice-based populations and increasingly is viewed as a key component of family medicine training, education, and practice. The UCLA Department of Family Medicine has a commitment to promoting research on important issues related to improving care provided to patients seen in family medicine and primary care settings.

The UCLA Family Medicine Multi-Campus Research Committee (MRC) was established over 35 years ago to help promote this commitment. Formed by the UCLA Department of Family Medicine and affiliated residency programs, the MRC has held annual research forums to facilitate the exchange of scholarly activities among the residency programs and highlight the creative work conducted by residents, fellows, faculty, staff, and medical students. This forum fosters the understanding that the best practice of Family Medicine and pursuit of health demands an active engagement with one’s community - a role of leadership with respect to a community of colleagues, of patients, and of the population at large.

Dr. Allen is an associate professor in the Department of Family Medicine and Community Health, and Director of the Program in Health Disparities Research at the University of Minnesota Medical School. Her research focuses on community-based participatory approaches to developing and implementing health promotion and tobacco and other substance use prevention interventions for immigrant adolescents and their families. She has led multiple studies funded by the National Institutes of Health, American Cancer Society, and other large foundations. Dr. Allen completed medical school at the University of Minnesota, and a Master's Degree in sociology from the University of Wisconsin, Madison. She was a Robert Wood Johnson Clinical Scholar at the University of California, Los Angeles. Dr. Allen spends her clinical career serving families disproportionately impacted by social determinants of health at the Community University Health Care Center in Minneapolis, Minnesota.
