When it comes to your finances, what role do you play?

When it comes to your money, you want to be actively involved with your financial decisions—not in the back seat. Being in the "front seat" means knowing what you own, what you owe, and how to pursue your goals. Ninety percent of women will be solely responsible for their finances at some point in their lives*. So it's vital to be in the front seat when it comes to your finances. That's why the UC Systemwide Wellness program is hosting a special financial education event just for women at UCLA.

Join us for a lively and empowering discussion, followed by a reception on

January 17 at the Luskin Conference Center:

Featuring Kathy Murphy, President of Fidelity Personal Investing and one of Fortune magazine's "50 Most Powerful Women in Business"; and champion for women taking control of their finances.

Seating is limited, so reserve your spot online now.

Be in the Front Seat: Helping You Achieve Your Financial Goals

When: Wednesday, January 17, 2018, 3:30 pm – 5:30 pm (including reception)

Where: Luskin Conference Center, Centennial Ballroom
425 Westwood Plaza, Los Angeles, CA

During this conversation we will discuss:

- Why financial wellness is especially important for women
- Surprising findings about women's changing financial roles
- How to be actively engaged in managing your personal finances and investments
- Important questions you should be asking to make better informed decisions
- Next steps to improve any financial situation

Mark your calendar and get ready to be inspired!

Can't attend but still want help? Saving and investment guidance is always available to you as University of California faculty and staff. Call 800-558-9182 today to have a one-on-one discussion about your financial future.

Investing involves risk, including risk of loss.

*Fidelity Investments, Women and Investments Survey, April 2016